Dr. Riddle's Experience of the Great Pennsylvania Deluge.

A RIDE BY RAIL THROUGH WATER,

With Side Notes of the Many Remarkable Scenes Observed.

HOW A RAILEOAD MET AN EMERGENCY

There are few in church circles better known than Dr. Matthew B. Riddle, of the Allegheny Seminary. As has already been stated in THE DISPATCH, the Doctor was one of those who had personal experience of the Johnstown storm. He has already told some of the Pittsburg papers part of what he saw, but a letter from him to the Hartford Courant isso graphic that we quote it below:

ALLEGHENY, June 8. on Friday morning at 8 o'clock I left New York, coping to reach home about the same hour that vening, by the Chicago limited on the Pennsylvaula Railrond. On the Wednesday following (June 5) about 3 P. M. Barrived at my house, weary and saddened, but profoundly grateful that I got home and that I had a home to get to. Though I was in little danger at any time, yet the story of that journey may not be without luterest to some of my friends.

risburg the black clouds hanging over the Blue Ridge were appalling in their blackness. Enter-ing the valley of "the blue Juniata" we found A TAWNY RIVER OF RAGING WATERS but as yet harmless. As the afternoon wore away and the valley narrowed, the signs of de-struction began. Bridges were crossed that looked dangerous; houses were seen to which people were passing waist deep in water. At Ty-rone the whole town seemed to be threatened. people were passing waist deep in water. At 1yrone the whole town seemed to be threatened.
Still we went on, occasionally over tracks under water, reaching Altoona ten minutes late. Here we learned there was a washout on the mountain, which would delay us, how long ne one could tell.
Immediately I telegraphed home that I need not be expected that night. The message was delivered in good season, but in a short time came the fearful catastrophe at South Fork, and we were cut off from the rest of the world. One train came in from the east, and then bridges went down behind us, while before us was this gorge of death, though we did not know it. We had been halted on account of a lesser break at Lily station: the dam had not yet burst, in fact our train was due there about the time it gave way.

Without any special anxiety, I settled comfortably for the night in the car Scotland, which was my home for four days. In the morning after breakfust news came of the great disaster. Mr.
Smith, manager of the Associated Press, who had been on the lil-iated day express, was the first cye-witness that appeared in Altoona. A little later came other passengers, among them one of my colleagues. Prof. Robinson, and a young lady from our street in Allegheny. The story they told everyone has heard in some form. Exageration seems impossible. By this time the limited from the west came in. It had been taken past the bridge and the danger, contrary to original orders. This precaution, as I learn, was due to the suggestion of a Pittsburg gentleman who had been at the lake overhauling his new cottage. He had fears that the dam would go.

Six TRAINS WERE THUS HELD

SIX TRAINS WERE THUS HELD at Altoons, three each way, and the hundreds of passengers were taken care of by the Pennsylva-nia Baliroad. Those who preferred slept in the Pullman cars, others were lodged at the Logan louse, where all were boarded at the expense of the company. Corporations may have no souls, but hen I remember that this great company, confronted by the greatest disaster ever known in the history of railways. was studiously careful of the history of railways. was studiously careful of the personal comfort of every passenger holding a ticket near the destroyed district, I feel as if it certainly had souls in it, and noble ones, too.

The good traits of "the average American," (in whom I have much faith, not being a magwump) noon began to show themselves. Helier for Johnstown was at once proposed. Five hundred dollars were raised in a very short time at the notel, and double that sum in Altoona. Provisions were sent off via Ebensburg, thence by wagons. But we had to stay. Reyond Johnstown there was no travel. To the east there was destruction, but not even the railroad officials knew how much. All telegraph wires were down in every direction. Yet that deisyed crowd was patient, friendly, uncomplaining. One foreigner, an Englishman, said to be a man of rank, was set to work on the road. On Monday the general superintendent reached Altoona from the east by skiff and wagon and hand car main!; That night it was announced that an attempt would be made on Tucaday morning to forward west bound passengers to Pittaburg, 31 miles of the distance by stage or wagon.

Next morning at 8 130 of us started by rall for Ebensburg on a branch road along the crest of the Alieghenies. We were warned that women and children would have the preference in case there was not transportation for all. So we sped around the Horse Shoe Bend, by Allegrippus, through the long tunnel that pierces the back bone of the mountain, and then along the western edge of the mountain, and than along the western edge of the mountain, and had about decided to accept, when one of my pupils drove up with a span of stout horses and a spring wagon. This he said six of us could charter to take us to a nearer point than Blairsville, whither the company's line of wagons was dispatched. If happened that a party of six, all known to me, could be formed, and off we started, to go as we pleased.

Just before starting an acquaintance came upfoot sore and heart sore. His sister had been lost in the day express, and he was searching for her body. He had walked is miles from Johnstown, and was looking for the conductor of the Pullman car in which she had traveled. The conductor I knew and where he was; this much I could do for the poor fellow.

Our route now lay along the old northern "pike," over which stages ran before the railroad days. A rough road, but not deep with mud. Four miles an hour was the rate of speed, but some spots on that road I can never forget. About fitteen miles out we crossed the crest of the Laurel Ridge, the first range west of the Alleghenies. Here a view was given us, so wide, so varied so CHABGED WITH MELANCHOLY INTEREST, that it remains the most wild be latered to the content of the source of the source of the source of the conductor of the source of the source of the source of the source of the

CHARGED WITH MELANCHOLY INTEREST, that it remains the most vivid picture of that entire journey. Behind me was the backbone, form-ing the horizon from north to south. Over it was banked just then a dense storm cloud, black as night, suggesting all the fearful possibilities of such a phenomenon. Off to the southwest, almost affects miles away, was a rift in the dark curtain. But under that rift lay Johnstown and the gorge fifteen miles away, was a rift in the dark curtain. But under that rift lay Johnstown and the gorge of the Conemangh, down which the waters had rushed, dealing death and destruction. Before us was the romantic chestnut ridge, while toward the north and northwest lay a broad landscape of many hills and valleys, away below us. It was the water sheds of the little hills, for near us the water flowed into the Allegheny, and just beyond the rivulets collected to form the north branch of the Susquehanna. which breaks through the mountain range of Lock Haven. In better circumstances I want to look at that scenery again. The old stage coach travelers saw more lovely views than we of this generation. The road wound over the hills, for a reason that we all felt, to escape the floods and mud. About 5 o'clock we entered, in a heavy rain, the hamlet of Armagh. Here was a country tawen, a relic of the stage-coach days. The landlose assured us he could accommodate us over night, that it was only two miles to the Conemaugh river, and a railway station on the opposite bank, from which trains were running. Gladly enough westopped. The company's travelers pushed on, Is miles forther, and we rested. Next morning our driver took us over two milos, measured by length, but half a dozen, measured by depth and other occentricities. At the river we began to encounter the desolation. The ferryman's house by on its side, his household effects scattered around it, and his little farm utterly destrayed. On the other side we walked half a mile through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of cofflins waiting to be need through the lowinness of coffl

CARRIED OFF FOR RUDE BURIAL. rude in form, but not in heart. Some friction there had been, possibly a little thieving, but the accounts of lynching, etc., are fabrications. At accounts of specing, etc., are instrictions. At last the train came, and at 30 clock I was home, five days and six hours from New York.

Few fared so well I, and yet, owing to the fact that I was to preach in Pittsburg on Sunday, and the failure of my telegram to reach the proper person, a large congregation was put in some alarmatout me. This is my story. The impression of it is deepened by the presence next door of a number of site sufferers. The ladies of our neighborhood have fitted up the main dormitory of our seminary as a hespital and home. These cities have done nobly. Some of our heaviest losers by the flood have been the heaviest contributors. Whatever interpretation may be put upon the calamity, it has increased my faith in the American people, my respect for their generosity and resiliency. As to the Fishing Club, it is due to the gentlemen composing it to wait for more thorough investigation before blaming them too everety. They believed the dam was firm enough; some of them boasted of its strength to me again and again. They are not selfish monsters, but include some of the kindest souls in all this country. Six linches of rainial in the Alleghenies is "an act of God," as the old law phrase hath it.

Plans for Erecting Residences and Store Merchants to be Provided With Business Places Gratis-Shelter for the Homeless.

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT. JOHNSTOWN, June 17.—A meeting of the Town Council of Johnstown will be held toforrow afternoon for the purpose of considering the matter of the military authorities erecting temporary houses and places of business for the merchants of the place who desire to resume business. Adjutant-General Hastings wishes to erect the buildings in the public squares of the town, and it will be necessary to obtain the consent of the Council to do so.

It was stated at the meeting that about 89 buildings would be required, and they could be erected at a cost of about $75 each. In order to have them put up at once and ready for occupancy in less than two weeks it would be necessary to erect them on vacant ground. The main public square is 244 feet square and surrounded by four principal streets. There are also four smaller spaces owned by the town, each 86 feet square.

General Hastings will meet the Town Council to-morrow and state to them what the Commonwealth desires. The only thing wanted from the borough will be the use of the public squares. The buildings will be erected without expense to those for whom they are intended. WHO WILL BEAR THE EXPENSE? The General has not yet received any assu rance that the State will pay for their erection, but if it cannot be arranged the money will be taken from one of the funds. There is enough lumber on the ground to start the work, an advices are being received daily that carloads are on the way. If it becomes necessary to purchase lumber the money will be found to do it without trouble to the citizens of the place, General Hastings received a telegram to-day from Cnicago, stating the 100 ready-made houses were being shipped as rapidly as possible, and the first installment of them would be received Saturday. These houses will be for the use of the people who lost their homes in the flood, and who are now stopping with friends. Some of the people have not slept under a roof since the night before the dam burst. A master carpenter will arrive here in advices are being received daily that carload burst. A master carpenter will arrive here in the morning, and will immediately proceed with the work of erecting buildings. McSwigan.

HEADED TOWARD PITTSBURG. Two Crooks Yesterday, and Others Before

Run Out of Town. FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT. JOHNSTOWN, June 17 .- The Department of eral Wiley, is still doing effective work in the matter of protecting the property of citizens. This morning two more crooks were run out of town by the officers of the department. Both were caught in the act of committing depreda-

Tornado Does Great Damage Among the Marble Monuments. .

PAPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 17 .- The terrible electric storm which visited the Chenango Valley region to-day was accompanied at Norwich by a tornado which devastated the large and handsome cemetery just beyond the outskirts of the village, where most of the dead of the town lie buried. At the height of the storm a dense black funnelshaped cloud was seen approaching the loud roar of turious winds and a redoubled lownpour of hail and rain. Nearly every headstone and monument in the path of the tornado was broken or defaced so as to be practically ruined. Some of the monuments destroyed were elaborate and costly family memorials, weighing 5 to 20 tons.

ALL RECORDS BADLY BEATEN. The Sister of a Drowned Man Robs

Pockets of His Rescuer. PERCIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. SING SING, N. Y., June 17 .- Penazo Fabiano, an Italian aged 25, was drowned this afternoon while bathing in the stream below Croton dam, Torrienco Rielly jumped in the water to try to rescue the drowning man, leaving his clothes on the bank. He only succeeded in bringing the lifeless body to shore. When he sought his clothes he found that $52 was missing from his trousers' pocket.

This afternoon he came to this village and obtained a warrant for the arrest of Terese Fabiano, the sister of the drowned man, claiming that she took the money while he was attempting to rescue her brother.

A number of the men employed at Johnstown by the various contractors, and who live in Pittsburg, returned last night over the P. R. R. for the purpose of casting, their vote today. The men who returned, it is said, claimed their right of franchise, and after voting for or against the amendment will return to their work among the ruins of the stricken city.

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

After the meeting a conference of the Building Committee will be held, and it will then be decided what kind of buildings to put up.

A meeting of the Building Committee was held this afternoon for the purpose of considering the situation, and if possible, devising ways and means of erecting temporary bouses. There were two propositions suggested—one to erect a number of buildings on the public square belonging to the borough, and allow the merchants to occupy them for 18 months. At the end of that time, if the occupants had not rebuilt their stores, the temporary buildings were to be torn down.

THE OTHER PROPOSITION

was to furnish the business interests of the town enough one-storied buildings to carry on their business. The structures were to be 20 by household.

(20 styles.) 140 pairs at $5 a pair. 40 pairs at $6 a pair. 35 pairs at $6 50 a pair. 60 pairs at $7 50, $8 and $9.

This list does not include the high-priced goods, though they were all included in the overhauling.

But it remains for the "odd lots" to present the regular slaughter prices.

1/4 pair lots, 2 pair lots, 3 pair lots, and 4 pair lots,

At your own price. They must go.

Odd pair lots of Portieres at prices to add attraction to the goods. They, too, must go.

Come early to secure your choice of these goods. There are many ways you can make use of odd Curtains and Portieres, and of the many lines, of which there are full representations enough, to furnish entire houses; we can only say you actually have never seen such bargains in Curtains.

Reserving also in Tanastries Bargains also in Tapestries. See also the Hamwocks and Canoples in the
